NOTE.

ARMS OF BONAPARTE, as seen in Florence and several other towns of Italy.
Gules, two bars argent, sometimes or, between two stars of the 2nd.
Since the Empire the arms adopted by all the Bonapartes with slight modifications, azure, an eagle or, holding in its claws fesswise a thunderbolt of the 2nd.

Arms of the Princes Murat, as now used in 1885.
Per fesse, in chief per pale, or, a horse rampant sable, and azure, two cornucopias or horns of abundance, placed saltirewise or, and in base, or, three human legs proper conjoined in the centre chief point; over all the escutcheon of the French Empire, surmounted by a Royal Crown and resting on an anchor or.

Arms (original) of the Beauharnais, adopted family of the Emperor Napoleon I., now Princes Romanoffski in Russia, Dukes of Leuchtenberg in Germany.
Argent, a fesse surmounted by 3 "merlettes" sable.

All are members of the Roman Catholic Church and French Subjects except when otherwise stated.
Owing to the great difficulty and almost impossibility in finding some of the correct dates, corrections and suggestions will be thankfully received by the Publishers.
